

THE CLEANSE PROTOCOLS

The Lemonade Detox

A short reset for the body, built on a simple drink and a short window of rest from solid food. This is the classic protocol I teach in my community, written out in full so you have it in hand.

What it is

The Lemonade Detox (also known as the Master Cleanse) is a short-term liquid protocol built around fresh citrus, real maple syrup, and cayenne pepper. It gives your digestive system a rest while still feeding your body real minerals and quick energy, and many people find it clears mental fog and lightens the load on the whole system within the first two or three days.

This is a tool, not a lifestyle. Most people run it for 3 to 10 days, then return to whole, plant-based eating with the habits from their protocol.

The drink

Mix this fresh, one glass at a time, and drink it throughout the day. This is your only intake during the cleanse, alongside plain water if you are thirsty between glasses.

Per glass (about 10 ounces):

- 2 tablespoons fresh lemon or lime juice
- 2 tablespoons genuine maple syrup (grade B, the real thing, not pancake syrup)
- 1/10 teaspoon cayenne pepper, or to taste
- 10 ounces filtered water

Drink 6 to 12 glasses a day, spaced out from morning to evening. Make it fresh each time rather than batching a large pitcher, the lemon holds its benefit best fresh-squeezed.

Your daily rhythm

- Morning: a saltwater flush on an empty stomach. Stir 2 teaspoons of uniodized sea salt into 1 quart of warm water and drink it down. This moves things through your system within the hour, so plan to be near a bathroom.
- Throughout the day: your lemonade, 6 to 12 glasses, spaced out. No solid food.
- Evening: a gentle herbal laxative tea if your body needs the extra help, a senna-based or "smooth move" style tea is fine.
- Rest: this is a good window to slow down. Skip anything strenuous and let your body do its work.

Coming off it, the right way

This step matters as much as the cleanse itself. Do not go straight from lemonade to a normal meal, your digestive system needs to wake back up in stages.

Ease back in over 2 to 3 days:

- Day 1 off: fresh orange juice, diluted with a little water, sipped through the day
- Day 2 off: vegetable broth and soft fruit, then a light soup by evening
- Day 3 off: soft cooked vegetables and simple plant-based meals
- From there: back to your normal whole-food eating

Who should be cautious, or skip this one

This is education, not a substitute for your own doctor, and every body is different. Please talk to your provider before starting if any of this describes you:

- You manage diabetes or blood sugar swings closely, the maple syrup will affect your glucose.
- You are pregnant or nursing.
- You have a platelet or bleeding disorder such as ITP, or you are on a blood thinner, and want to fast from solid food for several days. Talk to your provider first, and if you proceed, watch closely for any unusual bruising or bleeding and stop immediately if anything feels wrong.
- You have a history of eating disorders, this kind of protocol is not appropriate for you.
 - You are underweight, or your doctor has told you that you cannot afford to lose weight right now.

Registered Nurse, not a prescribing physician. Never start, stop, or adjust a medication or health protocol without your doctor, especially if you manage a bleeding disorder, diabetes, or are on prescription medication.
