

THE FREE ASSESSMENT

The Men's Wellness Assessment

One reading is a snapshot. A pattern tells the story. This is how you find your pattern.

Most men I talk to can tell me their blood pressure number. Very few can tell me what was happening in the hour before they took it, or what else changed in their life around the same time the number started climbing.

That second part is where the answer usually lives.

Think about a photograph. Someone could take one picture of you while you are blinking, or stepping off a curb, or halfway through a sentence. The picture is real. It just does not explain your whole day.

Your numbers are the same. They matter, and they also have context. This assessment walks you through that context, so you stop reacting to the loudest number and start seeing the pattern underneath it.

How to use this

Answer honestly, not the way you wish it were. Nobody grades this. When you finish, circle the three answers that surprised you most, and do not try to fix all three at once. Just notice the pattern first.

1. Your numbers, with context

---

Take two readings on the same day, a few hours apart, and write down what was happening around each one.

Reading one, and what time of day:

---

What was happening in the hour before it (rushing, arguing, eating, sitting, just woke up):

---

Reading two, and what time of day:

---

What was happening in the hour before that one:

---

When did you first notice your numbers changing, roughly what month or year:

---

What else was going on in your life around that same time:

---

2. Sleep

---

- ☐ I am usually asleep before 10:00pm
- ☐ I fall asleep within about twenty minutes of lying down
- ☐ I sleep through without waking
- ☐ If I wake, it is usually around the same time each night
- ☐ I have been told I snore, or that I stop breathing in my sleep
- ☐ I wake up feeling like I actually rested

The hour before bed usually looks like:

---

If I wake in the night, the time is usually about:

---

3. Pressure and stress

---

Stress is the corner most men skip, because it does not feel like a health problem. It feels like Tuesday.

- ☐ There is something I am carrying that I have not told anyone about
- ☐ I am the one other people depend on financially
- ☐ I check news or my phone within ten minutes of waking
- ☐ I regularly replay something from the past that I cannot change
- ☐ I am bracing for something coming that I cannot control
- ☐ I have real rest in my week, not just collapse

The pressure I carry that almost nobody knows about:

---

Something from my past that still gets a reaction out of my body:

---

Something ahead of me that I am already dreading:

---

4. Food and timing

---

- ☐ Breakfast is my largest meal
- ☐ Supper is my smallest, or I skip it
- ☐ I eat within two hours of going to bed
- ☐ Most of what I eat comes from a package with a label
- ☐ I add salt at the table without tasting first
- ☐ I eat something sweet most days

Yesterday I ate:

---

The meal I would least want to write down:

---

5. Energy, strength, and drive

---

These shift slowly enough that most men explain them away as age. Sometimes it is age. Often it is the pattern.

- ☐ My energy is steady through the day, not crashing in the afternoon
- ☐ I have lost strength or muscle in the last few years
- ☐ Weight has settled around my middle
- ☐ My drive and interest in things has dropped noticeably
- ☐ I recover from a hard day the way I used to
- ☐ I have brain fog, or I lose words mid sentence

Compared to five years ago, what feels most different in my body:

---

When did I first notice it:

---

6. Water, movement, and daily rhythm

---

- ☐ I drink water steadily through the day, not all at once
- ☐ Most of my water is early in the day rather than at night
- ☐ I move my body most days, even just walking
- ☐ I get real sunlight on my skin most days
- ☐ I go outside for fresh air on purpose, not just in transit
- ☐ I use alcohol to take the edge off

About how much water I drink in a day:

---

What movement actually looks like in my week:

---

7. What you are already doing

---

Medications I take, and how long I have been on them:

---

Supplements or herbs I take:

---

What I have already tried for my numbers:

---

What helped, even a little:

---

What my doctor has told me, in their words:

---

What I wish someone would actually explain to me:

---

Now find your pattern

---

Go back through and circle the three answers that surprised you most. Not the three that look worst. The three you did not expect to write down.

Those three are your starting point. Not all of them at once, just the pattern they point at.

The one honest question

Not "I want better numbers." Underneath that. Why do you want more time? What do you still want to do? Who are you trying to be here for? Write it somewhere you will see it, because on the days the work is boring, that sentence is what keeps you doing it.

When you are done

Hit reply to my email and tell me the one area you realized you have been overlooking. I read them.

If you want the teaching behind all of this, I do it every week here:

skool.com/braveworksrn

---

Educational and lifestyle content only. Not medical advice, diagnosis, or treatment. Joel Polley is a Registered Nurse, not a prescribing physician. Never start, stop, or adjust any medication without your own doctor. This assessment is a self reflection tool, not a screening or diagnostic instrument.

